ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court upon motion of the defendant pro se for a recommendation for early release from confinement. (Doc. No. 32).

Title 18, United States Code, Section 3624(c) allows the Bureau of Prisons (BOP) to place a prisoner in pre-release custody under conditions, including home confinement, for the last portion of her sentence to prepare her for re-entry into the community. The Second Chance Act of 2007, among other things, expanded the allowable time period for pre-release custody from six to twelve months, but limits the time in home confinement to six months. Pub. L. No. 110 199, § 251, 122 Stat. 657, 692-93 (2008). The Act clearly states that it does not alter the BOP's authority to designate the place of the prisoner's imprisonment under 18 U.S.C. § 3621, and prohibits a court from ordering that a sentence be served in a community confinement facility. Id. The First Step Act of 2018, among other things, amended § 3624(c) by adding a sentence directing the BOP to place qualifying prisoners on home confinement for the maximum amount of time permitted. § 602, Pub. L. 115-135 (2018).

The defendant recognizes the BOP is ultimately responsible for placement at a residential re-entry center, but asks the Court to order home confinement as soon as she is eligible. (Doc. No. 32: Motion at 1). Although the Court appreciates the defendant's efforts to improve herself during confinement and her plans for perform community service after release, the Court declines to recommend her early release because the BOP is in a better position to make the necessary assessment.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED that the defendant's motion is DENIED.

The Clerk is directed to certify copies of this order to the defendant, counsel for the defendant, to the United States Attorney, the United States Marshals Service, and the United States Probation Office.
